

Abstract

CNT network materials have extensive application foreground. Viscoelasticity is the basic characteristic of this kind of materials. The ability of energy absorption and dissipation is determined by the microstructure and its evolution, such as CNT orientation, entanglement, sliding and bundling, etc.. This talk will try to outline the basic understanding of this problem up to now.